57. – 60. sorular aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

The ability to recognize people automatically by analyzing bodily characteristics such as fingerprints, faces and eyeballs, collectively known as biometrics, has long been a goal of technologists and governments alike. Plans for large-scale projects to incorporate biometric scans into passports, identity cards and visas are now under way in several countries. Since January 5th the US has been scanning foreigners from particular countries as they arrive at its airports. Both the US and Europe plan to start issuing biometric passports as soon as next year. Biometric identity cards are being adopted in Hong Kong and Oman, and Britain plans to follow suit. Biometric technology has been around for quite a while, but has not been widely adopted, for good reason: while it can improve security in some situations, its costs more frequently far outweigh its benefits. Even the most advanced systems falsely reject a small proportion of legitimate users, and falsely accept illegitimate ones. At best, the introduction of biometric identity documents will produce a marginal increase in security, at enormous cost. But at worst, biometrics could, in fact, reduce security in several ways.

57. According to the passage, the use of biometric technology ----.

- A) has not yet been introduced in airports
- B) seems likely to prove a cost-effective means of increasing security
- C) for identification purposes is becoming increasingly popular
- D) for identity cards is widely regarded as an infringement of liberty
- E) has encountered so many problems that it will probably be abandoned

58. It is stressed in the passage that biometrics ----.

- A) is of little, if any, use as a means of ensuring full security
- B) is a comparatively cheap means of attaining reasonable levels of security
- C) has proved highly satisfactory in both Hong Kong and Oman
- D) is an infallible method of recognizing people
- E) is developing only slowly because governments are nervous about the response that it will receive

59. According to the passage, technologists and governments ----.

- A) in Europe and the US agree that further trials are needed before biotechnical passports are issued
- B) are unduly concerned about the expenses entailed by biometrics
- C) underestimate the number of mistakes made in identification by biometrics
- D) are equally convinced that biometrics is the only means of attaining full security at airports
- E) alike have been looking forward to having biometrics solve identification problems

60. We learn from the passage that, although biometric technology has been in use for sometime, ----.

- A) it is still only being used for identification purposes in visas
- B) there are as yet no plans to use it on a large scale
- C) its technologists show no interest in trying to improve it
- D) in many respects, its disadvantages are often greater than its advantages
- E) it is still only rarely being used for legitimate purposes

People are fascinated by juries. They are the focus of a disproportionate number of novels and movies, and the 1995 murder trial of O.J. Simpson virtually brought the United States to a standstill because people could not miss the exciting televised court proceedings. Juries represent one of the most significant decision-making groups, not only because they are presented as a symbol of all that is democratic, fair and just in a society but also because of the consequences of their decisions for defendants, victims and the community. A case in point is the 1992 Los Angeles riots, which were sparked by an unexpected 'not guilty' verdict delivered by an all-white jury in the case of the police beating of a black suspect. Juries are groups and thus are potentially prey to the deficiencies of group decision-making. In addition to these problems, there are a number of issues to do specifically with the task confronted by juries. One issue is the influence of laws and penalties on the jury. Harsh laws with stiff penalties tend to discourage juries from convicting, which is quite the reverse of the intention of legislators who introduce such laws. Juries have to deal with enormous amounts of information presented in court. It has been suggested that information delivered later in the trial is more heavily weighted in decision-making. Further, inadmissible evidence, that is the evidence given by witnesses or interjected by counsel but is subsequently ruled to be inadmissible for procedural reasons by the judge, still has an effect on jury deliberation.

- 61. According to the passage, one reason why juries attract so much public attention is that ----.
- A) the credibility of the whole legal system depends on them
- B) they frequently make a wrong decision
- C) they stand for the values of democracy and justice
- D) people see them as their own representatives but envy their power
- E) they are made up of ordinary people who are not interested in the case

- 62. As is pointed out in the passage, there is a tendency among juries to ----.
- A) avoid convicting the accused if the penalty is a severe one
- B) concentrate on the evidence that is forthcoming at the start of the trial
- C) favour harsh penalties so as to deter law-breaking
- D) trust their own judgment and ignore the guidelines suggested by the judge
- E) forget they are a group and supposed to give an unanimous decision

- 63. The writer points out that a jury's process of decision-making ----.
- A) is only interesting when the trial is a long one
- B) in real life is very different from the way it is presented in films
- C) needs the guidance of the judge
- D) has always aroused a great deal of public interest
- E) can be adversely affected if the trial is televised

- 64. By the term "Inadmissible evidence", used in the passage, is meant any piece of evidence that ----.
- A) comes up late in proceedings
- B) the jury regards as inappropriate
- C) contradicts a former piece of evidence
- D) the jury is advised to take into consideration
- E) the judge has discounted

A growing percentage of the American economy and of other advanced industrial economies in Europe and Asia depends on imports and exports. Foreign trade, both exports and imports, accounts for a little over 25 per cent of the goods and services produced in the United States, and even more in countries such as Japan and Germany. This percentage will grow in the future. The success of firms today and in the future depends on their ability to operate globally. Globalization of the world's industrial economies greatly enhances the value of information to the firm and offers new opportunities to businesses. Today, information systems provide the communication and analytic power that firms need for conducting trade and managing businesses on a global scale. Controlling the far-flung global corporation, which includes communicating with distributors and suppliers, operating 24 hours a day in different national environments and servicing local as well as international reporting needs, is a major business challenge that requires powerful information system responses. Globalization and information technology also bring new threats to domestic business firms: because of global communication and management systems, customers now can shop in a worldwide marketplace, obtaining price and quality information reliably, 24 hours a day. This phenomenon heightens competition and forces firms to play in open, unprotected worldwide markets. To become effective and profitable participants in international markets, firms need powerful information and communication systems.

65. According to the passage, one of the benefits of global communication systems is that they ----.

- A) allow firms to have access to unprotected information
- B) make buying and selling throughout the world more competitive
- C) keep firms informed about the economic performance of several other countries
- D) enable firms to learn in advance what customers want to buy
- E) enable customers to see the goods before buying them

66. It is clear from the passage that the American economy ----.

- A) is increasingly becoming dependent upon foreign trade
- B) has dramatically fallen behind that of Germany and Japan
- C) has benefited greatly from information technologies
- D) is at the forefront of the globalization process
- E) has overcome many serious business challenges and now faces a brighter future

67. The point is made in the passage that, if a firm is to do well, ----.

- A) its services must vary in accordance with the needs of the customers
- B) it needs sound feedback from its foreign partners
- C) it should give priority to services rather than goods
- D) it must keep on introducing new products
- E) it has to expand its operations throughout the world

68. It is clear from the passage that, for a firm to operate globally, ----.

- A) it must have learned how to be competitive
- B) it must have extremely efficient systems of communication
- C) its products and services must be of the highest quality
- D) it must give preference to overseas markets
- E) its annual rate of growth must follow a steady trend

Smoking has become unfashionable in most Western countries over the past decade or more, yet its incidence remains high. Even legislation against smoking in a shared work space and banning it on public transport has had limited success, when measured by a decline in the percentage of people still addicted to smoking. In these countries, the highest rates of smoking tend to be found among people in the 20-29 age group, teenage women and working-class groups. Smokers tend to be well-informed about illnesses related to their habit, such as lung cancer and heart disease. Despite this knowledge, current smokers tend to underestimate the risk of dying from smoking when compared with former smokers and those who have never smoked. Anti-smoking campaigns have used a wide variety of media and techniques to discourage smoking. For example, one campaign adopted a television commercial and poster, while another used a direct-mail approach, along with radio advertisements. Various celebrities have helped by performing at places of work and by recording verbal messages. There have been different target groups. One campaign aimed to reach women, who outnumber men in the under-18 smokers group, stressing the benefits of not smoking with respect to health, beauty and fitness. Another used baby stickers. Another campaign highlighted the benefits of a smoke-free workplace and was conducted in major clothing chain stores, supplemented by radio and television advertisements. There is a socially supportive context nowadays to quit, and the recognition that passive smoking is dangerous may help some in the future to quit permanently.

69. It is pointed out in the passage that today the social environment ----.

- A) is the main reason why so many young people smoke
- B) is not taken into account in combating smoking
- C) gives a great deal of encouragement to smoker to give up smoking
- D) plays a bigger role than ever before on the 20-29 age group
- E) in most Western countries is virtually the same

70. According to the passage, though everyone knows that smoking is harmful to health, ----.

- A) it is generally recognized that it does not kill people
- B) governments have rarely taken any action against it
- C) people of advanced age cannot give up the habit
- D) smokers usually ignore the dangers
- E) non-smokers get irritated by anti-smoking campaigns

71. The author points out that although, in most Western countries, legal measures have been introduced against smoking, ----.

- A) the results have been disappointing, especially as regards young people and workers
- B) a growing majority of people simply ignore them
- C) teenage women in particular violate these regulations
- D) a really smoke-free workplace is hard to find
- E) the media have not extended any support for these measures

72. It is clear from the passage that efforts to stop people smoking ----.

- A) concentrate on the dangers of passive smoking
- B) have been confined to media advertisements
- C) have largely focused upon women
- D) have been extremely varied and directed at different segments of society
- E) have been declining over the last decade

Gauguin began his career as a painter late in life. Born in Paris in 1848 he was raised by his widowed mother in Peru, where his paternal half Peruvian grandmother lived. "You know. I have Indian blood, Inca blood, in me" he later wrote, "and it's reflected in everything I do". At 17, Gauguin joined the French Navy and sailed around the world, encountering many native cultures during the ship's ports of call. In 1872, he married a Danish woman named Mette Gad and they settled in Paris, where he worked as a stockbroker for a decade. All the while, Gauguin collected contemporary art by the impressionists - in particular Renoir, Monet, Pissarro, who later became a friend, and Cezanne, whose primitive style and sweeping colors affected him deeply. In 1883, at 35 Gauguin abruptly left his wife, his five children and his bourgeois lifestyle to devote himself to art. He traveled to Brittany, where he painted and sculpted, and to Martinique, where he discovered the vibrant beauty of the tropics. Then he moved to Aries, in Provence, where he and his friend Vincent van Gogh painted colorful landscapes and planned their escape to Tahiti, which they imagined as exotic, bountiful and free of stifling European mores.

73. It is clear from the passage that, for both Gauguin and van Gogh, Tahiti ----.

- A) held the promise of new cultural experiences for them to reflect in their paintings
- B) was the island best able to provide them with the stimulating landscapes they longed for
- C) was a land that promised excitement and an escape from the rigidities of European life
- D) was to prove a great disappointment from the point of view of their artistic expectations
- E) was to be the inspiration of their greatest works of art

74. We understand from the passage that Gauguin

- A) was only interested in painting, not in any other form of art
- B) decided to make a life-long career for himself in the French navy
- C) was very much a family man and deeply attached to his children
- D) was particularly fond of Martinique and its tropical climate
- E) felt very proud of his Indian origins

75. The point is made in the passage that Gauguin, during his service in the French navy, ----.

- A) came into close contact with primitive societies and their ways of life
- B) visited Tahiti and made up his mind to return and perhaps even settle there
- C) managed to trace his grandmother in Peru
- D) discovered that he was racially related to the Incas
- E) came to meet a number of impressionist painters

76. According to the passage, even before Gauguin took up painting himself, he ----.

- A) had traveled extensively through various parts of French
- B) was greatly interested in the works of contemporary painters and influenced by them
- C) and Pissarro dreamed of going to Tahiti and settling there
- D) fell under the influence of van Gogh and tried to paint in his style
- E) had deserted his family and settled in Aries

77. – 80. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

The typical African-American seems uninterested in saving for retirement. Statistics show that in recent years Americans in general have become increasingly less disciplined about saving. However, this trend is disturbingly prevalent among black Americans. Only 59% of African-Americans say they or their spouses have saved for retirement, compared with 77% of white workers, according to a recent survey. What are the reasons for this disparity? Historically, there's been a cultural disconnection between the retirement portrayed in the glossy brochures - lavish vacations in high-priced villas - and the African-American reality. Most blacks expect to go on working even after they have officially retired, rather than lying around on a beach. Their experience in retirement has never been like mainstream white America. "Typically", they say, 'we work until we die". Researchers have often attributed the savings gap for African-Americans to lower wages or to a lower comfort level with the stock market. Those factors do play a part, but even educated professional blacks earning six-figure incomes tend to ignore their retirement and follow a wasteful way of life. Economists say the behavior mirrors that of first-generation immigrants who engage in conspicuous consumption. "Black professionals today are often first-generation college graduates who, like other groups, want to symbolize that they have succeeded."

77. The point is made in the passage that, unlike most white Americans, most African-Americans ----.

- A) continue to work even after they have retired
- B) spend a great deal on costly leisure activities
- C) take their retirement seriously and plan for it carefully
- D) are denied access to any form of higher education
- E) are keen to demonstrate the fact that they have been well-educated

78. We get the impression from the passage that there is a sense of unease expressed about ----.

- A) the unreliability and unpredictability of stock-market dealings
- B) the poor living conditions of many retired African-Americans
- C) the cultural gap between African and white Americans because it is widening
- D) the African-Americans' lack of interest in putting money aside for retirement
- E) the growing number of black professionals in the business world

79. As regards first-generation college-educated black professionals who earn a lot, the point is made in the passage that they ----.

- A) save little and spend extravagantly
- B) are the ones who regularly save up for their retirement
- C) are more determined than their white colleagues to enjoy themselves in their retirement
- D) are keen to buy up high-priced villas in readiness for their retirement
- E) are not satisfied with what they earn and want more

80. As it is pointed out in the passage, African-Americans do not save up for their retirement ----.

- A) since they wish to keep on working to the end of their lives
- B) because they are unfamiliar with the savings schemes
- C) although they look forward to having luxury holidays
- D) because they rely on the savings of their spouses
- E) in part because they are not well-paid
